NUMBER 9 | ADDISON AND WOODHULL, STEUBEN COUNTY, N. Y., THURSDAY, MARCH 3, 1938 | VOLUME IX

All Teachers' Contracts Are Renewed—School Board Notes

Committee on staff members re-engage all faculty members—Members discuss light bill, recreation center for True gymnasium, school nurse's report, Grange anniversary and payment on bond.

Teachers contracts for the coming year were all renewed at a meeting of the Addison Board held Thursday night in the school building. The contracts are returnable at the March 31 meeting. All teachers were offered their contracts.

The meeting opened with a discussion of the use of electric lights in the building. It was thought by President Maurice E. Miller, that the electric bills were higher than in past years. Trustee Harry Laffkas suggested this might be owing to the number of activities. He also suggested that the students should be taught that you cannot get something for nothing.

Recreation Center

Francis Edwards was given permission to coach a group of junior boys in basketball in the True gymnasium Saturday afternoons. There was some discussion on liability there for it was learned by Mr. Miller that there was no liability insurance on that building. The members voted to insure the building to protect the board. The rate is $16 a year and will be pro rated on the balance of the year.

Newly Appointed

Kenneth Armstrong attended his first regular meeting since his recent appointment to the board. In the discussion in the use of the True gymnasium he stated that there is no community center for recreation here and felt this building should be turned into a recreation hall for community services.

There was some discussion of the matter of glasses for some of the younger students. This matter was left to Principal Irving R. Gladstone and Mr. Miller.

School Nurse Report

Mr. Gladstone gave a report of the activities of the school nurse, Miss Rula Laffkas, during the past month, which is as follows: giving health advice, 58; first aid, 36; audiometer tests and retests in grades three to eight, 806; excluded from school, 8; communicable diseases found, 10; supervised giving of milk to 150 students of the lower grades. Mr. Gladstone said the children in the lower grades should have their ears tested but that it would have to be an individual job owing to their inability to write. One member suggested that teachers should also be tested for their hearing.

Trustee Charles Park moved that the school nurse be retained for another month and this was seconded by Mr. Armstrong. Mr. Gladstone reported that the rider clause for the insurance policies for teachers carrying students in their cars on school work have been received.

Mr. Miller reported that the water service in the True gymnasium should be changed owing to the construction work planned in the vicinity for the new bridge. He stated that Elbert Crane of the water company had suggested the change. Inasmuch as the company provides water gratis to the schools, the company does not feel responsible for caring for the services. Mr. Crane suggested a copper service be run into the building. This will be done before construction starts, on motion of Mr. Park and seconded by Trustee A. B. Ackerson.

Grange Anniversary

Mr. Armstrong requested the use of the school gymnasium and other facilities for the Addison Grange for Friday night, April 1, when the organization celebrates its 40th anniversary in Addison. It is planned to have the senior class serve the supper on that night. Inasmuch as this will be a school activity, giving the seniors an opportunity to earn money, the permission was granted. The evening will be open to the public for the program.

Payment on Bond

The sum of $11,000 was paid on a school bond and $1,235.49 interest was paid from state aid money of $17,489.08 leaving a balance in the bank of over $6,000. Collection of school taxes will start in April.

TEACHER TENURE OPPOSED

A bill was recently introduced in the New York Legislature which would, if passed, extend teacher tenure laws to include teachers in the rural districts of the state. This is a matter which deserves the earnest consideration of every tax payer.

Recently the Associated School Boards took under advisement the matter of extension of teacher tenure of rural districts and the conclusion was reached that such extension would not be for the best interests of the schools at this time. Hence this organization is opposing the move.

Teacher tenure as in force in the cities and larger villages of the state provides that after a teacher has taught a probationary period of three years in a school he cannot be denied a contract, save for drastic reasons. Last year tenure was extended to include villages of not less than 5,000 population, and many citizens of those communities were pretty thoroughly exorcised about it. All who oppose this further extension of teacher tenure into the rural districts should hasten to notify their assemblyman and senator of their views.

INFERIOR MERCHANDISE

A publishers' trade paper carried an article last week which brought out some interesting facts concerning the mail order catalogue business. For one thing, it was stated that it costs the mail order houses approximately eleven per cent more to do business than it costs the rural storekeeper to handle his merchandise. And this greater cost is naturally handed on to the customers who send to the far away city for their merchandise.

Shoes are one of the items on which thousands of persons get fooled buying from a picture printed in a catalogue. The catalogue houses do have a few bargains sprinkled in their shoe section, as well as other sections of their book, but they practice buying the last end of manufacturers' run of goods, and in most all cases the buyer would get far better values by trading at home. And besides, the uninitiated customer pays the transportation costs for bringing to his door an item of merchandise he has not seen.

If the shoes fit so badly he cannot wear them the customer can send the pair back, it is true. But often being in a hurry to use them, and thinking the shoes will soon "break in", the customer keeps a pair which bring torture every time they are worn. And when a place pinches he cannot step into a shoe service station to get the spot stretched, as he can when purchasing from a local dealer.

Because people are gullible, or do not understand they are buying inferior merchandise for the price from what they would get from a reliable local store, the mail order houses continue to take thousands of dollars out of every community each year. And the people who patronize them most are taken in because they do not actually compare the goods they send away for, with superior merchandise they could get at home, without taking it unsight and unseen. Probably part of the fault lies with the local merchant who does not use enough advertising space to let the public know what he has.

BIGGER WASTE PAPER BASKETS

Since the New Deal has been in power in Washington editors the country over have been compelled to purchase larger and larger waste paper baskets. Time was when a basket the size of a twelve-quart pail sufficed to hold the trash which passed over an editor's desk once a week. But that day is passed. The first year of NRA newspaper offices were compelled to double the size of their trash baskets and as the days of this administration lengthen, and its manifold bureaucracies strengthen, the baskets had to become bigger and bigger.

One editor says it is now necessary to use a box about five feet by five feet. As we haven't quite that much room to spare we are forced to empty ours oftener. There are long letters and short letters but all coming from government agencies are fat letters filled with endless drivel no one has time to read, let alone print in the columns of a newspaper. So in they go, not one by one but in handsful, as we frantically pitch them out of the way to get at mail that is important.

We are often appalled at the terrific waste this sending of endless propaganda from government offices in Washington must entail. It is doubtful if one in a thousand of these fat envelopes ever gets opened, let alone read through. Yet on they come by the millions, and as they are compounded by some addle-brained federal employes, and sent out of Washington by the trainload, the costs mount up like a mountain. Millions of new debts are added to our staggering national total as the bureaucrats send out their daily batch of waste paper basket fodder.

If Mr. Roosevelt were one-thousandth part as anxious to balance the national budget as he is to hold the popularity of the voting public, he would shut down on this grist of propaganda disgorged from government offices in Washington every twenty-four hours. But the big joke of the whole affair is actually on him. Editors may be forced to get bigger and bigger waste baskets and work overtime shoveling the Washington trash into them, yet the poor suckers who write the stuff rarely are able to see any of it in print. And the army of propagandists the administration keeps on the public payroll to preach the gospel of the New Deal is bent on a futile mission.

A FINISH FIGHT

"Jackson vs. Richberg is a fight to a finish. The Battle of the Century".

You'll probably never see that in headlines—but it actually depicts an epic conflict that is going on today in the beautifully planned city by the Potomac.

Robert Jackson, recently promoted from Assistant Attorney General in charge of the anti-trust division, to the Solicitor Generalship left vacant by Stanley Reed's elevation to the Supreme Court, is one of the closest Presidential advisors. He opened the current anti-monopoly campaign. Generally speaking, he favors highly aggressive tactics toward business, an extension of governmental control, and a policy of swift reprisal against those who oppose the ends of the Administration.

Donald Richberg, once head of the defunct NRA, is another man close to the President. Mr. Richberg is now a prominent Washington lawyer, with an important practice. He favors a policy of conciliation and cooperation with business, to the end that regulation may come more from within, and less from without.

Both of these men are seen frequently at the White House, both have easy access to the Executive ear. Will the President finally accept Jackson's views, or take Richberg's instead, or compromise between the two? Whatever answer is made to that question will profoundly affect the course of government in this country.

DESTRUCTION OF PRIVATE PROPERTY

If government officials were authorized to visit the homes of 200,000 American citizens and callously confiscate or destroy furniture, radios, food, clothing, the family automobiles and anything else that came under their hands, there would be an indignant uprising. The nation would forthrightly demand repeal of the law permitting such an outrage.

And yet, as incongruous as it may sound, this is, in effect, exactly what is happening in the struggle between the Tennessee Valley Authority and the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation. The effect of the political drive for government ownership of electric power is to undermine and destroy the private electric properties in the Southeast by means of subsidized, tax-free, unregulated competition. It is on the verge of "success" for the simple reason that no private enterprise can compete in business against government.

And now, "as a last resort in a desperate situation" the President of Commonwealth and Southern has offered to sell the properties of his company affected by TVA, as integrated systems to the government or the individual states in which the systems operate. Government spokesmen have so far indicated no willingness to purchase the entire properties of individual operating electric plants. Instead they simply wish to purchase the best parts of certain companies and leave the rest to struggle along the best they can like a crippled horse. Utterly no consideration is given to the more than 200,000 persons whose hard-earned savings are invested in the securities of the companies affected.

This may be within the letter of the law, but wherein does it differ in principle from entering a man's home and confiscating his personal belongings?

TAXPAYERS FOOT THE BILL

A curious situation exists in Nebraska which is a stronghold for municipal ownership of electric utilities. PWA hydro-electric projects on the Platte River in that state are nearing completion, and up to December 4, 1937, according to the Chicago Tribune, they have been unable to sell their power to Nebraska cities which have municipally-owned electric plants, for the simple reason that the cities have refused to buy. The hydro-electric power costs more than the power generated in the cities' own steam plants.

The situation is ironically humorous. If the cities in question had highly-taxed privately-owned utilities and they refused to buy power from public projects, the promoters of state socialism in the electric field would try to drive them out of business by tax subsidized, tax-free competition. Of course, in the meantime, the private plants would be smeared with charges of exploiting the ratepayer and mulcting the investor.

It will be interesting to watch the struggles of the bureaucrats in Nebraska. If the Federal government manages to force PWA electric power down the throats of Nebraska cities and charge rates sufficiently high to pay out, then the citizens of Nebraska are stuck. If not, the general taxpayers of the nation are stuck for the millions which the Federal government has spent on a strictly local project in the state of Nebraska.

And No Rescue Party on the Way

The Knight With The Wooden Sword

By WALTER LIPPMANN

IN A time like this when so much is hidden, when the policies of so many states are backed by sudden violence and are meant to surprise, it is not easy to estimate confidently the consequence of an event like Mr. Anthony Eden's resignation. But I see no reason as yet which compels us to take the desperately tragic view of it, and to declare that it marks the surrender of Great Britain to all the powers of darkness.

On the contrary I can see many persuasive reasons for thinking that Mr. Eden's resignation is a necessary step in the education of the democratic peoples, and that it may prove to have been the only way in which these peoples can be made to clarify their purposes in face of the dangers that beset them

For it is necessary to remember that though Mr. Eden sincerely believes in the principles of the League and of democratic resistence to the designs of the military dictatorships, in fact his term of office has been marked by a series of humiliating surrenders and submissions. Between what Mr. Eden has wanted to do and what he has been compelled to do there has been a very great difference. It has been so great that, for example, Miss Dorothy Thompson, who hails him as "The Last Knight of Europe," was scolding him last week because he had assented to Hitler's coup in Austria. It cannot be a bad thing to liquidate a situation which can bring about such confusion in public opinion, which can cause the friends of democracy to look upon Mr. Eden as their champion when he defines his principles and to feel betrayed when they look at the record.

The crux of the matter, it seems to me, is that ever since the Ethiopian affair Mr. Eden has been in an impossible position. Instead of being the defender of the principles with which he has been associated, he has been driven step by step to compromises which threaten to end in the complete discredit of those principles. The reasons for this are evident. At no moment since the League set out to apply sanctions to Italy has Mr. Eden been able to make his principles effective by convincing Mussolini that Great Britain was ready to fight.

Yet nothing else had the smallest chance of impressing Mussolini. Great Britain has not been ready to fight for the principles that her Foreign Secretary was proclaiming. Great Britain has not felt herself to be well enough armed She has not felt sure enough of her allies. The British people have not had the will to fight. And no one knew this better than Mussolini.

That being the case, the Last Knight of Europe has had to go forth to fight the infidels brandishing a wooden sword.

The failure of Mr. Eden's conduct of British foreign policy is due in the last analysis to the fact that the democracies have wanted policies for which they were not prepared to pay the price. Mr. Eden has voiced their aspirations. But he has not controlled their behavior. They have been unwilling to admit that the adversaries of democracy are ready to kill and to be killed in order to achieve their purposes, and that as against men who are in this mood, words, moral attitudes, economic threats and blank cartridges are altogether unavailing.

What is more, the democracies have not realized that to take the high moral attitude with the dictators when the dictators believe that it is a pious bluff is the most dangerous of all courses which a government can pursue. For the high sentiments do not restrain the aggression, and the constant yielding encourages it. It arouses the kind of contempt which Hitler displayed on Sunday, and in the end is almost certain to lead to some incident where the government is trapped and compelled to fight anyway.

Mr. Eden's resignation brings the democracies to a point where they have to make up their minds to fish or cut bait. If they are going to stand by Mr. Eden's principles, then in the world as it now is they must convince themselves to begin with, and then the dictators, that at some definite point they will stand and fight for those principles. In dealing with these warrior statesmen the democracies must not delude themselves with the idea that there is any bloodless, inexpensive and pleasant substitute for the willingness to go to war. Collective security, economic sanctions, moral pressure can be made effective only by nations known to be willing to go to war if necessary.

If that willingness to fight does not exist, then Mr. Chamberlain is right when he concludes that he must try to make tolerable terms with the dictators. It is one thing or the other.

It is far better, so at least it seems to me, for Mr. Chamberlain to test out to the limit the possibility of a bargain with Italy and Germany, and to have Mr. Eden on the outside, if the bargain cannot be concluded or if the terms are too severe and too dishonorable, prepared for a return to power with a real mandate from the British people.

Fortunately Great Britain is a democracy, so that the terms of the bargain will have to be submitted to popular debate. If they are in any way tolerable terms, the maintenance of peace will be worth a heavy price. If the terms are intolerable, then at last perhaps the democratic peoples may decide that their heritage is worth defending and they may set up governments that do not have to brandish wooden swords. Then, it may be, we shall see an end to the proclamation of noble principles just before and just after they have been in practice abandoned.

"Last Knight of Europe"

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

"Dim drums throbbing, in the hills half heard,
Where only on a nameless throne a crownless prince has stirred,
Where, risen from a doubtful seat and half-attainted stall,
The last Knight of Europe takes weapons from the wall" . . .

THUS once, when chivalry seemed dead in Europe, and all Christendom was capitulating to the infidel, did a "nameless Prince"—Don John of Austria—move alone, and is celebrated in Chesterton's great ballad "Lepanto."

Men rose and followed that gallant prince. But who will follow the man who rose and renounced his doubtful seat, as the British Minister for Foreign Affairs, actually believing that the present and future greatness of England lies in the triumph of principle? Actually believing that the chivalrous spirit is part of the English heritage?

Does he stand alone, Anthony Eden? Alone in believing that "corruption never has been compulsory"?

"Agreements," he said, "that are worth while are never made on the basis of a threat. Nor in the past has this country been willing to negotiate in such conditions."

Hearts leaped up, as he spoke; hands instinctively applauded; history was speaking, and experience.

"Not a contribution to peace, but a surrender to blackmail."

Lord Cranborne speaking. The Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs moved to the side of his chief, and walked out of office with him.

But when they counted the votes, the spirit of the city-merchant, the bargainer, the shop-keeper, Neville Chamberlain, was stronger.

Curious. It is the young men of England who stand by Eden. "Make a pact with the tyrants, or it will mean war," was the gist of Chamberlain's counsel.

Chamberlain is sixty-odd. Eden is forty. Eden was a Captain with the British forces, enlisting at seventeen. He had no youth, Eden. The war took it. It took his boy brother, too, and forever. He was killed. Eden is still young enough for war service. Chamberlain is not. Eden's generation will rule England in the next two decades. Chamberlain's will die.

Yet, it is Eden who believes that freedom will die in this world for countless years unless it is willing to take a risk, and take it now.

While the last Knight spoke, Nazi mobs rushed through the streets of Vienna, crying "Heil Hitler" and "Down with the Jews," and Jews rushed terrified from cafés while disarmed police watched passively.

In Prague, the last parliamentary government in Central Europe trembled, but from its besieged position announced that before it capitulates it will fight, even if it knows that it will lose. "Freedom will never belong to those who will not die for it," said Benes to me a year ago. But if Czechoslovakia fights? Another Spain? Then what?

In Rumania King Carol announced the revision of the constitution, the establishment of dictatorship, the suppression of freedom.

And the day before, in Berlin, Adolph Hitler dictated his peace terms to all Europe.

Germany's mission—against the "bolshevist democrat" (That in Hitler's mouth means you and me.) Against the "revolutionary terrorist," against "the reactionary dreamer."

Against the British Foreign Minister, Mr. Eden. He names him, in scorn. To which of these categories, does the graduate of Eton and Oxford, the gallant soldier, the glass of fashion and the mold of form, belong?

Hitler and Mussolini have only one thing, in which they are stronger than France and Britain, under the present leadership of those countries.

They have political imagination. The political imagination to take risks; the political imagination to guess that what happened Monday in London would happen.

Who makes a realistic policy? The city-merchant, Chamberlain? Or Eden?

Let us ask a few questions.

If the policy of Britain is to be, from now on, merely the preservation of Britain, her lines of communication to the Empire and the Empire itself, what logical objection can she bring, and with what force would she support her objection to Nazi-Fascist domination of Spain?

What objection could she make to Japanese domination of China, especially since both Hitler and Mussolini have publicly stated their support of that conquest?

What objection could Britain make to Italian-German-Japanese domination of South America?

Logically, none.

And where will such a policy bring Great Britain, ultimately, vis-a-vis the United States, especially in Asia and South America?

Even if we write off China, which is certainly possible, where will it bring Britain and the United States in regard to South America?

The territory east of the Rhine will be economically dominated by Germany. Nobody else will be able to trade there effectively.

In addition, through the possession of the raw materials of that area, Germany will accelerate her trade drive in the world, with her own special kind of dumping program, possible only to a totalitarian and completely controlled economy.

In the East, Japan, in control of the immense raw material resources of China, and backed by her highly rationalized industry in what amounts to a totalitarian industrial state, will also accelerate her trade drive. And, at the same time, Japan will effectively prevent others from trading in China, just as she has already done in Manchukuo.

In Africa, the trade area open to Britain will be encroached upon both by the return of German colonies and the already existing Italian empire there.

Therefore, the outlets will be diminished, and the competition in the area that is left will be increased.

One great, rich territory for trade and development will remain: South America. There the United States is already fearful of German, Italian and Japanese domination. And, as Britain finds her export markets elsewhere in the world cut down, she herself will be driven toward the Western Hemisphere. At the same time, she will be faced by ever-growing, ever-stronger Germany, Italy and Japan. If, therefore, the United States should come into conflict with Germany, Italy and Japan in South America, would Britain not, in effect, be under both a military and economic compulsion to follow, not the policy of the United States in South America, but that of Italy, Germany and Japan?

And how about the conflict of ideas? Can one make a pact with totalitarian despotisms armed with enormous propaganda weapons, and not become, one's self, the victim of that propaganda?

No.

Lincoln said: "A nation cannot exist half slave and half free."

Neither can the world—in the long run.

So who is the realist in England? Who sees beyond the next few months?

Eden, or Chamberlain?

This Week In Sports

By the Grandstander

"I'M WONDERING WHY"

To the writer there seems to be in every real home-towner's make-up somewhere, an earnest desire to win—in business, in industry, in sports. This has been evidenced by a small group known to all of us as the "Addison Merchants". Their record of the first half of the NYP League race is conclusive proof. More power to them, and I, for one, believing they are real first place contenders, am sold on the idea that we should do something with our own desire to win.

Now, how about you! Don't you share this same desire? When? Where? How? You've got it, you say, in your job, in your business all of the time.

Why not make it felt also in your own community? by your own little group of basketballers who thru THEIR spirit to win, may be doing a better all-round job for this—our—community than we grant them.

Until you display YOUR desire to win by patronizing them—'plunking down' your two bits every time they bring a rival team into your own back yard, and by cheering them on, not until then shall the writer stop wondering—why.

Another comment was given the Grandstander during the past week which reads, "There is one athlete in this village who is getting a swelled head, which is not helping his popularity. He also should know there is no such thing as a one-man team".

—o—

The fact that people are riled up enough about the Addison Merchants to put their thoughts in writing shows the Town Team has something. The loss by a hair at Covington last week was a tough pill to swallow, but the league title is still anyone's and it might as well belong to Addison as anyone else.

Glenn Cunningham ran nine times during the past season and was the winner in the nine races. His season's work was climaxed in a blaze of glory in Madison Square Garden Saturday night before 14,000 frenzied track fans who jammed every section of the indoor sports center. The former Kansas U. sprinter outdistanced the country's best including his traditional rival Gene Venzke.

Eddie Acaro, diminutive jockey, rode five winners in one day on the Miami track Saturday for the outstanding record.

Joe McCarthy and his Yankees are in St. Petersburg for their winter training period. Holdouts not in camp include Joe DiMaggio, Lou Gehrig, Frank Crosetti, and Red Rolfe. They are expected to be around some time this week to talk contracts.

High school basketball fans got their money's worth Saturday night in a double header bill in which the girls' team trimmed Jasper girls and the varsity squad pulled a last minute over-time rally to defeat the visitors by two points. The girls won easily 28 to 13 while the boys were narrowly averting defeat. The shot that tied the game came from the Knights when Lyons hit the basket, the ball bounded high and Addison hopes went with it, but the ball again struck the rim on the inside and teid the score. In the overtime Addison scored the only extra points.

The Orange schedule is as follows: September 29, Clarkson; October 7, Cornell at Ithaca; 14, Georgetown; 21, Duke at Durham, N. C.; 28, Penn State.

November 4, Michigan State; 11, open date; 18, Colgate; 25, Maryland at Baltimore.

Washington Senators batterymen went to work Monday at Orlando, Fla., for the winter months. There were three catchers and 13 pitchers on hand.

Twenty-nine colleges will send the pick of their track athletes to Madison Square Garden Saturday at the 17th annual Intercollegiate 4A track meet. Columbia is the defending champion with Cornell, Princeton, Yale, Manhattan as the chief rivals. Columbia, however, has Ben Johnson, Negro successor to Jesse Owens' title as the fastest human.

Lawson Robertson, U. of P. track coach and Olympic coach on many occasions, spoke Saturday of the unsportsmanlike war the Japanese are waging and suggested the Olympics of 1940 be brought to America or Europe. He said he would not coach if the Olympics went to Japan.

CMTC Open to American Youth

New York, Mar. 3—With registration of 6,800 young Americans as its goal, the eighteenth annual enrollment campaign for the Citizens' Military Training Camps opened Tuesday throughout New York, New Jersey and Delaware, it was announced at headquarters of General Frank R. McCoy, U. S. Army, commanding the Second Corps Area, on Governors Island.

These popular summer encampments will be conducted at five Regular Army posts for youthful residents of the Second Corps Area, each operating for a thirty-day period during July and August. Free of cost to the student and free of obligation for future military service, the C. M. T. Camps are open to young men between 17 and 24 years who are of good moral character and sound physique.

Outdoor life under ideal camp conditions, with athletics, rifle and pistol shooting, citizenship studies and other advantages, is offered to all who enroll for the camps. Transportation going and returning, wholesome food, uniforms, athletic equipment, laundry service, and medical attention are provided by the government.

Outlining the C. M. T. Camps schedule for this summer, the announcement from General McCoy's headquarters said all candidates without prior military training would be assigned as basic students to Plattsburg Barracks, N. Y., and Fort Niagara, N. Y., both opening July 5, and Camp Dix, N. J., opening July 12.

Advanced infantry students also will train at Plattsburg Barracks, Fort Niagara and Camp Dix at the same time the basic, or first-year, candidates are undergoing training there. Advanced signal corps students are to be assigned to Camp Dix during this period.

Coast artillery advanced students will be instructed at Fort Hancock, Sandy Hook, N. J., beginning August 2. Field artillery candidates will attend the advanced course at Madison Barracks, N. Y., opening on the same date.

Outgrowth of the original Plattsburg camps of 1913, 1914 and 1915, initiated by General Leonard Wood and enthusiastically approved by ex-President Theodore Roosevelt, the Citizens' Military Training Camps aid to develop the manhood of the Nation by bringing together young men of high and different types on a common basis of equality and under the most favorable conditions of outdoor life, it was explained at Army headquarters.

"To teach them the privileges, duties and responsibilities of American citizenship, to stimulate the interest of the youth of this country in the importance of military training as a benefit to the Nation and the individual taking such training, to inculcate self- discipline and obedience, and to develop these young men physically, mentally and morally are the purposes borne in mind by the army officers charged with conducting the C. M. T. Camps" the Army announcement stated.

Childs Host to County Shepherds

Steuben county shepherds will meet at Canisteo March 10 to discuss various phases of the sheep industry. George L. Brown representing Kenwood Mills, Albany, will show a talkie movie and discuss the possibilities of farmers marketing their wool direct to manufacturers. With the present low price of wool interest is keen on this method of marketing.

"A Sheep Program for New York State Growers" is the subject assigned to H. A. Willman, Cornell sheep expert, who will discuss cooperative dipping service and cross breeding as part of his talk.

The forenoon session will meet at the Grange Hall at 10 a. m. and after the ladies have served lunch will convene to E. M. Childs' farm for the afternoon program.

Demonstrations and special training in the Australian method of shearing will be given by E. S. Bartlett of the Chicago Flexible Shaft Company, Chicago, Illinois, at the afternoon session.

In addition to shearing practice and contests, exhibits and demonstrations on drenching, wool grading, external and internal parasite control will be arranged for those who are interested. At least four different breeds of registered ewes will be shown by Steuben's master showman, Dewitt Stewart.

In addition Fenton Wager, Penn Yan, Secretary of N. Y. S. Wool Co-operative, and Doc Roberts, sheep expert from Buffalo Producers Co-op. will appear on the program which has been arranged by the farm bureau's newly organized sheep committee.

PARITY—Do you wonder what the word "parity" means as used in the AAA bill? Here is the original definition, as taken from the bill: "'Parity' as applied to prices for any agricultural commodity, shall be that price for the commodity which will give to the commodity purchasing power with respect to articles that farmers buy equivalent to the purchasing power of such commodity in the basic period; and in the case of all commodities for which the base period is the period August 1909 to July 1914, which will also reflect current interest payments per thre on farm indebtedness secured by real estate, tax payments per acre on farm real estate and freight rates, as contrasted with such interest payments, tax payments, and freight rates during the base period". How would you like to figure that out? Clear as mud, isn't it?

HERO— As a youngster, one of our big heroes was Richard Harding Davis, author and soldier of fortune. We were interested to learn this week that he founded the present student governing body of Lehigh University in the 80's to show his scorn for Greek letter fraternities which sought his membership. The Club, when founded by Davis, was "devoted to pipes, books, beer and gingeralia". The next year, Davis was expelled from Lehigh for reasons which have been lost to history. Expulsion would have broken the spirit of many young men. It apparently was a challenge to Davis.

Pasture Study Club Meeting March 11

The third and last meeting of Steuben county's winter Pasture Study Club will be held at the Canisteo Grange Hall from 10:00 to 3:00 March 11.

Men attending these meetings this winter have been able to discuss with Professor E. VanAlstine some of the many pasture problems confronting them, such as fertilization, liming, plowing and reseeding.

A great deal of interest has developed recently in connection with improving Steuben county pastures. Men attending the meeting March 11 will decide among other things, where pasture tests, which will include fertilization, seeding, and rates of seeding will be put out this spring, in an attempt to discover the best ways and means of producing results on Steuben county farms.

Of particular interest in this connection will be the putting out for the first time, of wild bird's foot trefoil seed which is doing very nicely now and being produced on a small commercial scale in some of our eastern New York counties.

HOME BUREAU

Leaders Confer About Program

Local leaders and officers of Home Bureau units throughout the county will discuss program planning methods at a special county-wide meeting to be held at the Baptist Church in Savona on March 11. Plans for the meeting are in charge of the county executive committee and Miss Orilla Wright, Assistant State Leader of Home Economics Extension. The meeting will begin with a luncheon at noon served by the Savona Home Bureau. This will be an important conference as it is the only countywide meeting to be held in preparation for program planning for the coming year.

Mrs. Gordon Conderman of Howard will preside at the meeting and other committee members will take charge of short project discussions as follows: Household Management, Mrs. F. W. Ives of Avoca; Housing, Mrs. Arling Cobb of Greenwood; Foods and Nutritition, Mrs. Harry Spence of Hornell; Landscaping, Mrs. Helen Reynolds of Painted Post; Clothing, Mrs. Aaron Putnam of Wheeler; Recreation, Mrs. Gordon Conderman.

Units Plan for Better Storage

During the next few weeks Members of 12 Home Bureau units in the county will be studying more convenient arrangements of clothes closets. The work will be in charge of Miss Lucille Case, who will spend five weeks in the county devoting all her time to this particular project. Miss Case is a graduate of the State College of Home Economics at Cornell University and spent several months in Steuben County in the fall acting as Assistant Home Bureau Agent.

The first meeting which Miss Case will conduct in the cooperating units will consist of an exhibit of clothes closet equipment, some made commercially and some of which may be made at home. This meeting will also include a discussion of points in closet arrangement for greater convenience and to make use of every bit of storage room where space is limited. In a few of the units special clothes closet conferences will be held before the first discussion meeting. Homemakers will invite members of their unit to come to their homes and study the actual problem of closet arrangement, lack of closet space, or whatever the individual difficulty may be.

The second meeting in the project will be a working school where members may actually make some of the equipment which they can not buy commercially or which they can make to good advantage. Units in which Miss Case will be working include Campbell Creek, Savona, Kanona, Canisteo, Hornell, South Hornell, Hornell Armory, Pleasant Valley, Avoca Greenwood, Painted Post, and Troupsburg.

Stewart and Dann Cows High— Smith Herd Leads Association

The Southern Steuben Dairy Herd Improvement Association reports 857 cows on test with 123 cows dry from 35 dairies tested by Robert S. Drake. C. A. Stewart and Son of Addison have high cow for butterfat production. This purebred Holstein produced 64.7 pounds of butterfat from 1540 pounds of milk. Robert Dann of Painted Post leads the Association with high cow for milk.. This purebred Holstein produced 1996 pounds of milk containing 59.9 pounds of butterfat. Farm, Home Week Sets New Record

Popularity and importance of Cornell's Farm and Home Week to New York state agriculture were indicated this year by the largest attendance in the 31 years the event has been held.

Slightly more than 15,000 persons registered during the week, as compared with 11,000 in 1937 and 7400 in 1936.

Many things contributed to the increased attendance, says Professor Ralph Wheeler, general director. Exceptionally fine weather and the better economic condition of the farmer, are two reasons. Others were the attractions for rural youth which resulted in an increase of from 1,000 to 1,500 more youngsters on the campus. More interest among women and more delegates from home bureaus throughout the state helped to swell the final figure.

This year's program, too, was one of the best, offered, he says. Another important reason for the unprecedented attendance was the support given by newspapers which printed many announcements of events for their readers and gave the people in the state a knowledge of the program.

More than 45,000 bulletins on agriculture and homemaking were requested and distributed to visitors during the five-day period, by far the largest number in the past 31 years.

BRASS TACKS For POULTRY RAISERS

By BURTON P. THARP

Advantages of the American Class

The American class of poultry which includes the Rhode Island Reds, Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes Dominiques, Rhode Island Whites, Jersey Giants, and other less common ones, has several distinct characteristics which sets them apart from other classes of poultry.

They are excellent layers of brown eggs. In general they do not lay as many eggs as the Mediterraneans but they excel the Mediterraneans in their value as meat. For that reason they are called dual-purpose fowls. The Barred Rocks, a variety of the Plymouth Rocks, top the list of price quotations as broilers. In some markets white eggs bring premium prices but there are other markets which put the premium on brown eggs.

The American breeds do not reach maturity and do not lay as young as the Mediterranean breeds. The American breeds make good sitters and will stick to the job of raising a brood of chicks. Since incubators have come into such general use the fact that many of the hens become broody in the spring is a liability to the owner rather than an asset. Some strains have been developed in which broodiness is less than in others.

The fertility of the eggs in these breeds is lower than in the Mediterranean breeds and it is necessary to use more miles to insure greater fertility.

The American breeds are friendly, quiet, and can be handled easily. They are good foragers but they do not wander far from the poultry house. They are content with a poultry yard of average size.

A poultry fence for these fowls need not be more than about five feet high provided there are no objects in the yard from which to fly over the fence. Their weight makes it extremely difficult for them to fly and their quiet disposition makes it easy to confine them.

The combs and wattles are comparatively small and do not freeze easily. The birds stand bitter weather very well. If properly housed they will keep up good egg production in all kinds of weather.

CHAPTER CHATTER

The F. F. A. Chapter Chatter column has been omitted the past two weeks because of vacation for Washington's birthday last week and due to the fact that the week previous the chapter members were at Ithaca for Farm and Home week.

Some of the events recorded have occurred during this time but we believe they may have some news value even at this late date.

The annual Father and Son banquet which was held some time ago was a success. Over 100 were present and all seemed to have a good time. All of the speeches were excellent and the crowd seemed to enjoy the music and skits that were put on by the F. F. A. members.

Mr. Orvis gave an excellent talk on "Changes in Agriculture" Later he explained some of the new courses that have been installed at the Alfred Agriculture school. It is a difficult task for a speaker to hold the attention of a mixed group of adults and students but Mr. Orvis succeeded in keeping everyone's attention at a high pitch throughout his entire speech.

The Ag boys wish to take this opportunity to thank all those who made their banquet a success. Rev. Axtell did his usual fine job of leading the group singing. He was accompanied at the piano by Janet Taylor. Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Crane and Mr. Armstrong added much to the success of the banquet by their excellent talks. Miss Caster and her homemaking girls served an excellent dinner with perfect percision.

To the above and all others we thanks you.

Forty members of our chapter attended Farm and Home Week activities at Cornell University. Members of the Agricultural IV class attended Monday and participated in the various judging events. In the evening they attended the state banquet which was held in Willard Straight Hall. Approximately 2,000 boys and teachers were present.

The local group returned to Addison that evening. On Tuesday a bus load of thirty-three boys and a carload of five attended.

Each boy had to attend a certain number of lectures and report on them. On Tuesday afternoon a State F. F. A. meeting where delegates from each chapter in the state were represented, a discussion of the change of the state constitution was held at this time.

Harold Wellman who graduated from the local department two years ago and who since has been studying an agriculture business course has been offered a position with the Grange-League Federation Cooperative when he graduates in June.

Dates Fixed For Arbor Day

In a proclamation made public March 2 Commissioner of Education Frank P. Graves designated April 22, April 29 and May 6 for the observance of Arbor Day in New York State.

April 8 has been designated as Bird Day in this State.

The Arbor Day proclamation follows:

Most happy are we people of New York in our heritage of natural resources! With the approach of spring, Nature smiles in our waysides and meadows, and the woods beckon us to pastime and recreation. Our landscapes abound in shrubs and trees, and forests clothe our hills and forests. That we may preserve these natural beauties and retain their increasing value for ourselves and posterity, it becomes both our pleasure and moral obligation at this season of the year to plant trees. Let us, then, cultivate a love for trees, treasure them throughout our lives, and hand them down to succeeding generations as an inexhaustible legacy.

"What do we plant when we plant the tree?
A thousand things that we daily see.
We plant the spire that out-towers the crag,
We plant the staff for our country's flag,
We plant the shade from the hot sun free;
We plant all these when we plant the tree."

As required by the law of the State and in accordance with deep convictions and congenial duty, each year the Commissioner of Education fixes the time for the observation of Arbor Day. Therefore April 22, April 29, and May 6 are herewith designated as Arbor Day, and with local authorities is placed the responsibility to determine which date will best serve each community, and to conduct such programs as are agreeable and fitting.

"Rural Church" Is Lenten Theme

Forum subjects have been assigned for a series of Wednesday night services during Lent in the Presbyterian Church. Prior to the forum discussion there will be basket suppers in which all members of the congregation and friends are invited to participate, with the idea that a spirit of fellowship prevail.

There will be short devotional services led by various attendants and then a discussion of the forum topic. The theme of the topics assigned are to exchange ideas as to the meaning of the church in the lives of the various people concerned with that church. And thru the exchange of these ideas of what is expected from the church, congregation and pastor, a more mutual working out of problems will be undertaken.

The first in the series was Ash Wednesday, March 2, of this week and the topic was "Rural Mental Attitudes" by the pastor, the Rev. John V. Axtell, who opened the series to explain the idea and illustrate by his talk.

Wednesday, March 9, motion pictures on "Hearthstones and Altars" will be exhibited in the church parlors. This will be followed by the March 16 meeting at which young men of the congregation will discuss their idea of what a rural church should be. Kenneth Armstrong and Milton Crane will lead the discussion.

The March 23 meeting will be in charge of the Gillet Club and the March 30 meeting will be conducted on the topic, "The Rural Church and the Grange". A religious pageant will conclude the series of Lenten services with the Tuxis Club presenting the drama.

Curtis Taylor on Duke Dean List

Durham, N. C., March 1.—Thirty-six New York state students enrolled in the two undergraduate colleges at Duke university have the privelege of sleeping after eight o'clock in the morning—though few of them are taking advantage of the opportunity. They are among 307 outstanding students in the three upper classes whose names are on the "dean's list" for the spring semester.

Having one's name on the list entitles a student to attend classes or to "cut" classes as he pleases but, too many cuts may cause removal of one's name from the list, so most dean's-list students are both regular and punctual in their attendance on classes.

Dean's list rating is based on an average scholastic rating of "B" or above. About one student out of every eight has his name on the preferred list. Curtis Taylor, of Addison, is on this list.

Young Taylor is the son of Lynn A. Taylor of Church street, Addison. He attended the Addison High School. There he was president of the dramatics club during his senior year. He was valedictorian, and a member of the literary society, Taylor received the English proficiency award and the alumni scholarship.

Taylor is a member of Phi Eta Sigma, national freshman honorary society. He served as an associate editor of the Archive, student magazine, for the school year 1936-37.

Modified Tenure Bill Now Before The Legislature

PERRY HERALD

Approval of a drastically modified Teacher Tenure bill now before the State legislature is expected to be given by the local school board. Trustees of the local districts have vigorously opposed extension of teacher tenure and through the New York State School Boards association it is understood an almost state-wide objection has been voiced.

The new proposed amendment modifies the present law that applies to districts outside cities having a population of more than 4,500 inhabitants and employing a superintendent of schools. Under the terms of the proposed amendment a probationary period is extended teachers, followed by a five-year tenure to those who meet with approval of school authorities.

Unless some future limitations are imposed as to population of a school district, the Perry district is still outside the jurisdiction of the proposed new bill.

Under the proposed amendment now before the legislature at the expiration of the probationary term of a person appointed for such term, subject to the conditions of the act, the superintendent of schools shall make a written report to the board of education recommending for appointment, or tenure, reappointment with a written contract for a term of five years those found satisfactory through competency and efficiency.

The bill gives the district the right and power to terminate such a tenure contract if a breach of contract takes place on the part of the teacher and includes insubordination, immoral character, inefficiency, incompetency, physical or mental disability.

Such tenure is not applicable to teachers who reach retirement age.

Even with the concessions that have been made, the proposed tenure amendment is still in favor of the teacher. The teacher is allowed five years contract that cannot be broken by the board unless certain legal requirements are followed, but he may terminate the contract at any time. Thus if a board secures a teacher that is highly satisfactory and one a board would desire to retain, the trustees are powerless if the teacher has a better offer elsewhere or wishes to change for any reason.

Several acts are before the legislature seeking to push teacher tenure to the limit. Some bills would even extend life contracts to central high school districts, central school districts and common rural school districts. Nearly all are at the request of the New York State Teachers association, a powerful group.

Scarce and High-Priced

D. L. inquires about seed prices and the supplies of alfalfa, red clover, and alsike clover seed.

W. D. Swope of the plant breeding department replies: "Northern grown domestic alfalfa seed and red clover seed will be scarce and high-priced this spring. The supply of alsike clover seed will also be below normal.

"There are large supplies of imported alfalfa and red clover seed from sources other than Canadian. Little of this seed is suitable for planting in the northern states. New York growers should sow only northern-grown domestic or Canadian alfalfa or red clover seed.

"While prices are higher than last year, alsike seed is still priced below that of domestic red clover.

"To help overcome the shortage farmers may have to make some adjustments, such as to cut down on the rate of seeding, substituting some sweet clover, and perhaps using emergency crops."

Addison Girls-Boys Defeat Jasper Basketball Teams Sat.

The Addison High School basketball teams made a clean sweep of their games Friday with quintets from Jasper Central High. The boys took a close decision 30 to 28 while the girls won an easy victory from the visiting lassies by a 28 to 13 score.

The boys' game was close throughout, but consistent floor shots by Orr who scored 11 of his team's points and Tommy Lyons with 8, coupled with fast floor work on the part of Rice gave the locals the edge. For the visitors Willover dropped in 13 points to take scoring honors for the contest, while Cornell added 8 more.

Jasper drew first blood with a foul conversion, but field shots by Orr and Oakden soon put Addison in the lead. Moore of Jasper got one on the rebound, Orr steving a basket to match it. Dennis pulled a sleeper for the visitors while Oakden tossed one in from near center court. Willover registered another free throw to make it 10 to 6 in favor of the home crowd at the end of the first period.

At the beginning of the second quarter Jasper rallied to take the lead with field shots by Willover, Cornell and Willover. Orr slid through the Jasper defense to tie the score and Oakden popped in his third basket to give the Knights the lead. Cornell made a foul shot good, Root retaliating with a one-pointer. Orr steved another basket from center near the end of the half to make the score 18 to 13.

Baskets by Lyons and Triches put the locals further ahead. Cornell converted a foul, but Triches crashed through to register a pop shot. Dennis added a single point which was matched by Lyons. Cornell slipped through under the basket to toss one in and Willover added to the score with two set shots. Addison led 25 to 21 at the end of the third period.

Jasper tied the score in the last stanza with three foul conversions by Willover and a basket by Dennis while Lyons was making one free throw good. Local hopes sank as Cornell put the visitors ahead with a toss from the sideline. Seconds only remained, but they were long enough for Lyons to toss the ball basketward the final whistle blowing as it left his hand. The ball rolled around the hoop a couple of times and finally dropped in to tie the score. In the extra period Lyons came through with another basket which won the game, the Addison defense holding Jasper scoreless.

The Addison girls completely outclassed Jasper after a hectic first quarter. Little led the scoring which ended with Addison leading 28 to 13. She collected 15 points while Griffin led the visitors with 10. Four Addison girls were playing their last game with the maroon and gray, Little, Perry, Brennan and Beers, all finishing school this year. The guarding of Brennan, Manson, Aldrich, Beers, Horey, J. Whitmore, Greenfield and Docherty kept the Jasper sharp shooters bottled up most of the way and kept the ball down at the Addison end of the court.

Jasper took the first quarter 4 to 3 with Griffin and Stuart scoring field shots while Little was making one field and one foul shot good. Things were different in the next period as Little began to get the range of the basket and scored 12 points while Stuart made four more.

With a lead of 15 to 8 the Addison coach began sending in substitutes and they gave a good account of themselves the third period ending 21 to 9. From then on it was only a question of the size of the score, the Addison team with reserves in the line being able to outshoot their visitors.
